

Investment objective

To seek a combination of income and long-term capital appreciation, but with a focus on income, with a medium risk investment profile.

Benchmark

The Fund is benchmarked against the MSCI PIMFA Income Index (Total Return) and will take active positions relative to this index on both asset allocation and stock selection. The Fund's broad asset allocation (split by equities, fixed income and alternatives) will typically be restricted to a range, relative to the benchmark, set by the CSI Investment Committee.

Investment policy

In order to achieve its objective, the Fund will invest principally in a diversified portfolio of different asset classes such as equities, equity linked securities (including warrants and convertible securities), fixed and floating rate debt securities, index linked bonds, cash and cash equivalents. Debt securities (including sovereign and corporate) as well as higher yielding equities will be the dominant asset classes.

The equity part of the Fund's portfolio will contain primarily securities from the leading UK companies (FTSE 350) or their equivalents from overseas markets. The equity part of the portfolio may also consist of, but to a proportionately lesser extent, the securities of smaller companies. The bond part of the Fund's portfolio will contain mainly bonds such as sovereign debt or securities guaranteed by governments and corporate debt with the focus being on medium to high credit quality. The bond part of the portfolio may also consist of, but to a proportionately lesser extent, lower quality bonds.

Fund manager commentary

During the fourth quarter, the Fund returned 4.6% against the PIMFA Income Index that returned 5.5%. Relative underperformance was driven by our underweight to duration in corporate bonds.

The final quarter of 2023 saw world equity markets rebound strongly and returns on the Coleman Street Funds were no exception. Throughout the year, the narrative around the 'not too hot, not too cold' economic soft landing has gained traction and investors have placed the previously oven-ready recession back onto the shelf and begun to celebrate the apparently expert guidance of the US Federal Reserve and other central banks.

In our commentary this year we have argued that we felt sentiment was too pessimistic. We felt that economic resilience was high amongst both individuals and corporates, year-on-year effects would diminish headline inflation, at least temporarily, and volatility in markets would provide opportunities. In the face of more positive sentiment today, we think it is worth reminding ourselves that inflation remains an ever-present threat with long-term tailwinds and that, according to more than 500 years of capitalism at least, recession can only ever be delayed, never avoided.

In a year where the pendulum of sentiment appears to have swung from one end to the other, we think of ourselves as having invested in a permanent state of fearful optimism. This outlook is reflected in holdings within the funds where we have not been afraid to hold cyclical businesses that rely on at least somewhat discretionary spending, but we have been keen to make sure that this was always accompanied by strong margins, positive cashflow and a fortress-like balance sheet. Some of these businesses, such as Auto Trader (+40%) and Sage (+57%), have seen their attractive characteristics and continued progress rewarded with a strong share price performance in 2023. Others such as Hargreaves Lansdown (-14%) and Genus (-27%) have not.

We hope for a continuation of the recent market strength, but we are wary of the myriad and unknown risks that may await. So, our outlook is unchanged, we remain fearfully optimistic.
